

This is a conversation between Ralph Allison and Charity, a Professor CIE.

WASHINGTON, GEORGE

Ralph: There is another one I heard about, like George Washington, our first president, the leader of our country as it got started. He is said to have seen a vision of what the country was going to be like, or where it should go, in his tent one night and that is what enabled him to have some direction.

Charity: That was given to him by his Essence.

R: Yeah, that is another way, with a visual picture.

C: Visual images. Also auditory part of it. Not some kind of screaming in the head, but a gentle nudging. Most humans in the culture have been taught that if you hear something inside of your head, you are mentally ill.
